

WISH WALL MURAL

Day 4: Introducing the Wish Wall

The Connection:

Hello fourth graders. Last time I was with you we talked about secrets and wishing. We talked about different kinds of secrets: secrets to hide something and secrets to protect something. We also talked about different kinds of wishing. There are wishes for you and wishes for someone else. Wishes that you can make come true and wishes that are NOT for to you to make come true.

We have had lots of different discussions by now. Let me go over all the different topics we have learned about because we are going to talk about them all today. So far, we have learned about ideas and how ideas are important in art. We learned about Conceptual Art and how Conceptual Art is all about ideas. We have learned about murals, graffiti, and cover-ups; we thought about what these types of wall painting have in common and what is different about them. And lastly we have thought about secrets and wishing.

The Teaching:

Today I want to start by thinking about the very first example of Conceptual Art that you saw.

Show image of Kosuth's "One and Three Chairs."

Remember this artwork? This is an artwork titled "One and Three Chairs" by Joseph Kosuth. This artwork is about an idea. It is about the idea of a Chair and how one idea can be shown in many different ways. Here the artist has shown us three different ways to picture a chair. We can picture a chair in our heads when we read a dictionary definition of the word chair. We can picture a chair by looking at a real chair that you can actually sit down on, and we can picture a chair by looking at a photograph of a chair. Those are three good ways to picture a chair. This artwork teaches us that there are many different ways to show one idea.

Just like there are many ways to show one idea, there are also many ways to make a mural.

Show example of realistically styled murals.

This is an example of a mural. You should remember it from when I showed it two weeks ago. It was made with the permission of the wall's owner and it started with an idea. There are pictures of Martin Luther King Jr. and of the people who influenced his life, like Gandhi. The idea in this mural is to show how important Martin Luther King Jr. is. The idea in this mural is to honor Martin Luther King Jr.

Show example of mural with community written texts, like after 9-11.

This is ALSO a mural. It was ALSO made with the permission of the wall's owner and ALSO started with an idea. The idea in this mural is to react to the tragedies that happened on September 11, 2001.

This is ALSO a mural. It was ALSO made with the permission of the wall's owner and ALSO started with an idea. The idea in this mural is to present interesting patterns and colors.

These are three different ways to picture a wall mural. This is important. Think to yourself: what are the two things needed to make a wall mural? You need permission and you need an idea. These are the things you need to make a wall mural.

Recently I was thinking a lot about the idea of wishes—just like how we were ALL thinking about the idea of wishes the last time I was with you. I had the idea that I wanted to cover a wall with wishes so that we could show how important I think our wishes are, so that we can honor our wishes. I wanted to honor our wishes like you might honor Martin Luther King Jr. I wanted us to be able to write our wishes on a wall with permanent markers so that they could be honored. I wanted to make a wall of wishes. But I thought to myself: writing on a wall without permission is graffiti! Writing on a wall without permission is mean and can upset the people who own the wall. I don't want to be mean and I definitely don't want to upset anyone. I thought to myself: how can I make this idea without making graffiti? How can I make this wall of wishes without upsetting anyone?

Think about what we know about murals. You need two things to make a wall mural: permission for the wall and an idea. A wall of wishes could be a MURAL! We learned from Joseph Kosuth that there are many ways to picture a chair and that there are many ways to picture an idea. There are also many ways to picture a mural. Fourth graders, one kind of mural could be a mural made from our wishes.

I decided that my idea could be made into a MURAL. All you need to make a mural is permission from the wall's owner and an idea! I had an idea! My idea was that I wanted to cover a wall with wishes to honor the wishes. I just needed to get permission from a local wall owner. So I found a wall and got permission. I could make a mural ONLY IF I had permission and an idea: I had both! My idea was that I wanted to cover a wall of wishes to show how important I think wishes are.

I was very excited that I had solved my problem of how to make my idea without upsetting anyone but I kept thinking that I had another problem. I wanted the wishes to be private. I wanted to protect the wishes.

Last week we talked about what we do with our wishes on our birthday: we keep them secret. We make a wish on our birthday candles and keep it a secret. We keep our wish a secret to protect it. Last time I asked you why we might want to keep our wishes secret and why we might want to protect them. Do you remember some of the smart things you wrote down last time? Will someone share?

Those are all really good examples of why we might want to keep our wishes secret and protect them.

I decided that the wishes written on the wall need to be protected. They need to be secret. I decided that we could protect our wishes and keep them secret by painting over them just like cover-ups. Cover-ups are painted over graffiti to hide the graffiti. We can cover up our wishes the same way that cover-ups cover up graffiti.

We can write our wish on the wall with permanent marker, then cover up our wish with a layer of paint like cover-ups covering graffiti. And because we have permission and we have an idea, we will be making a mural! It will probably look very very different from a lot of other murals but that just shows that it is original. Remember Mr. R's artwork: "Erased de Kooning Drawing"? One thing you said was interesting about Mr. R's artwork is that it was original. Our wall of wishes will be original too. The wall of wishes will be an ORIGINAL mural.

Modeling and Active Engagement:

This week we are going to prepare to make our Wish Wall Mural. In two weeks, we will go to the wall where I got permission and we will make our Wish Wall Mural. Before we start preparing for this project, I was wondering if you have any questions?

Let's keep something else in mind: because this is a Conceptual Art project, the most important part of the project is the idea. The IDEA is that there will be wishes covering a wall. Because the idea is the most important part, the wishes we write on the wall are VERY important. We all need to think about what wish we want to put on the wall and we'll do that today. We will make a list of possible wishes we might want to put on the wall. Then, we will each choose one wish to write on the wall. You can share your wishes or keep them private. It is up to you. Let me show you what I mean.

Teacher should show an example of a list of brainstormed wishes, titled, "possible wishes for the Wish Wall Mural."

Fourth graders, do you see how I made a list of possible wishes for the Wish Wall Mural? This is what you'll do today, too. Open to the first page of your Writers' Notebook and write this title: Possible Wishes for the Wish Wall Mural. Then, start writing possible wishes. When you are done with your list, choose one wish that you want to put on the Wish Wall Mural. Put a star next to the wish that you have chosen for the wall. I'll know you are finished writing when your pencils are down.

Does anyone want to share a wish they might want to put on the wall?

Students share.

The Link:

Today we've talked about what you need to make a wall mural. You need permission to use a wall and you need to have an idea. We've talked about an idea for a Wish Wall Mural that we will make together and how this will be an ORIGINAL wall mural. We've also talked about how the most important part of this Wish Wall mural is the IDEA: the idea of wishes. Because the most important part of the Wish Wall Mural is the idea, it is a Conceptual Art mural.

Feel free to add any wishes to your lists over the next two weeks until we see each other again. Your wishes will stay in your writer's notebook. On the day that we go to the wall, you will write down one wish that you want to put on our Wish Wall Mural. Remember, you do not need to share your wishes with anyone if you don't want to, even when you write your wish on the wall.

WISH WALL MURAL

Day 5: Titles & Preparing for the Wish Wall

The Connection:

Hello fourth graders. Last time I was with you we talked about what you need to make a wall mural. You need permission to use a wall and you need to have an idea. We've talked about an idea for a Wish Wall Mural that we will make together and how this will be an ORIGINAL wall mural. We also talked about how the most important part of this Wish Wall mural is the IDEA: the idea of wishes. Because the most important part of the Wish Wall Mural is the idea, it is a Conceptual Art mural.

We ended the class with you writing your wishes in your Writing Journals. On the day that we go to the wall, you will have one wish to put on our Wish Wall Mural. Remember, you do not need to share your wishes with anyone if you don't want to, even when you write your wish on the wall.

The Teaching:

Today I want to talk more about the Wish Wall idea and mural, and also prepare for actually going to the wall.

If you remember, last time I explained how I had two problems that I was able to solve. My first problem was that I wanted to cover a wall with wishes but I didn't want to make graffiti or make anyone upset. I solved this problem by deciding to make a mural. All you need to make a mural is permission from the wall's owner and an idea! My idea was that I wanted to cover a wall of wishes to show how important I think wishes are. I was able to get permission from a local wall owner. That solved my first problem. My wall of wishes could be a MURAL and that wouldn't make anyone upset.

But I had a second problem. I wanted the wishes to be private. I wanted to protect the wishes and keep them secret. I solved this problem by deciding that we could protect our wishes and keep them secret by painting over them just like cover-ups. Cover-ups are painted over graffiti to hide the graffiti. We can cover up our wishes the same way that cover-ups cover up graffiti. We will write our wish on the wall with permanent marker, then cover up our wish with a layer of paint like cover-ups covering graffiti. This plan solved my second problem.

Now the most important part of this Wish Wall is the IDEA, the wishes. The most important part of this Wish Wall mural is that it is a wall covered in wishes and that these wishes have been painted-over to be kept private and protected.

I realized that I had another problem. We know that the idea is the most important part of this Wish Wall mural but if the wishes are hidden, how will people walking by learn about the idea? I wanted to make this mural different from other murals, unique and original. I didn't want to put anything on top of the wishes that would distract from the most important part of this Wish Wall: the idea, the idea that there are wishes written on a wall and that they are covered up for protection. I wondered how I going to let people know about this idea, if they couldn't see it when walking by the wall.

I was able to solve my problem by thinking about Mr. R's artwork: "Erased de Kooning Drawing."

Show image of Robert Rauschenburg's "Erased de Kooning Drawing"

Just like the Wish Wall, the most important thing about this artwork is the idea. How did Mr. R. let us know what his idea was without drawing pictures that might distract us from the idea? He gave us a TITLE to read: "Erased de Kooning Drawing." This title lets us know just enough about how the artwork was made to understand the idea. Also, Mr. R put the title right on the artwork to let us know how important it is.

We will do the same thing. Right on the wall we are going to write the title for the mural, the name of the school, and a brief description that will let people know just enough about how the artwork was made to understand the idea. "Wish Wall Mural, a mural made from personal wishes that have been covered in paint by 4th graders from Graham & Parks Alternative Public School." This title lets the people walking by know who made the artwork and how the artwork was made, but it doesn't distract from the idea of the Wish Wall.

By writing a thoughtful title, I was able to solve my final problem. Even though the wishes will be hidden and only colored paint will decorate the wall, people walking by will still be able to understand the IDEA behind the mural. The idea is the most important part of the Wish Wall and so I was relieved to have solved this problem.

Just like Mr. R's artwork, the Wish Wall Mural title will give just enough information about how the artwork was made for people to understand the idea.

Active Engagement:

Now that all the problems around this mural have been solved, we need to prepare for actually making this mural. But before we start preparing, I was wondering if you have any questions?

So now we need to gather up all our energy and all our attention to the most important part of the mural. The idea. The WISHES! Remember that this is what the Wish Wall will be all about. This is what will make the Wish Wall interesting and important and what will make it art. These wishes should be special and important to you. They should be thought about seriously and chosen carefully. They could be on this wall for a very long time.

With this in mind we will work on our wish lists so that we have as many wishes as possible to choose from. When we have written down all the important wishes we can think of, you will then choose ONE wish for the wall and write it on a card. You can share your wish or keep it private. It is up to you. Any questions?

Please take out your Writing Journal and open to the page titled: Possible Wishes for the Wish Wall Mural. When you feel that you are done with your list, choose ONE wish that you want to put on the Wish Wall Mural. Put a star next to the wish that you have chosen for the wall. I'll know you are ready when your pencils are down.

Does anyone want to share a wish from his or her list?

Students share. Pass out cards.

Now write the most important wish from your list onto the card. This card will stay in your Writing Journals until next week. At that time you will take your card with you when we go to make the Wish Wall. I'll know you are ready when you have put your card inside your Journal and have put your Journal away.

Students write wishes in their writing journal.

OK, now we will be ready for next week.

The Link:

Today we've talked about the all the problems that came up when I had an idea to make a Wish Wall. We talked in particular about writing the title directly on the wall: "Wish Wall Mural, a mural made from personal wishes that have been covered in paint by 4th graders from Graham & Parks Alternative Public School." This title lets the people walking by know how the artwork was made but it doesn't distract from the idea of the Wish Wall.

Because the most important part of the Wish Wall Mural is the idea, we have also prepared our ideas by writing possible wishes for the wall. We have all chosen our MOST important wish for the Wish Wall. This is the one wish that we will write on the wall. Remember, you do not need to share your wish with anyone if you don't want to, even when you write your wish on the wall.

WISH WALL MURAL

Day 6: Painting the Wish Wall

The Connection:

Hello fourth graders. This is Andi Sutton who is going to be taking pictures and video today.

Last time I was here we talked about the title of our mural: "Wish Wall Mural, made from personal wishes that have been covered in paint by 4th graders from Graham & Parks School." This title lets the people walking by know how the artwork was made and who made it. It lets people know about the IDEA behind the Wish Wall without distracting from this idea.

We also have our MOST important wish for the Wish Wall and have it ready for the mural on an index card in our Writing Journals.

The Teaching:

Now that we have done such a great job preparing for our wall of wishes, we will be going to the wall to make it. Before we do that I just want to let you know a little more about how the wall is going to look and what will happen once we get to the wall.

First of all, let's talk about the way that the wall will look. When I was thinking about making the wish wall, I kept reminding myself that the IDEA was the most important part of this Wish Wall Mural. The IDEA that the Wish Wall Mural is a wall covered in wishes and that these wishes have been painted out so they can be secret and hidden for protection. In trying to decide how the wall should look, I wondered to myself: what kind of LOOK, what kinds of colors and patterns, offer protection? And immediately I thought about camouflage. Who will explain what camouflage is?

Exactly. Camouflage is a way to help hide something by having it look like its surroundings. In the military, soldiers wear shirts that are the colors of the landscape so that they will visually blend into the landscape. In nature, birds and animals have fur or feathers or skin that matches the colors of the landscape so that they will visually blend into it. Camouflage helps rabbits stay hidden in bushes without hawks seeing them. Camouflage helps soldiers hide in forests without their enemies seeing them. Camouflage is for protection. I thought camouflage would be a great thing to think about when making the Wish Wall Mural. So, fourth graders, we are going to paint the wishes over with something that will blend in well with the neighborhood—we are going to cover our wishes with paint that matches the colors of the houses near the mural.

In a few minutes when we leave the classroom you will all bring only your coats and index cards. We will walk as a group to the wall where you will see that I have painted the wall yellow so that it matches the houses nearby and begins to blend in like camouflage. One half of the class will write on the wall first. The other half will walk around the block while the first group works. You will each choose a colored permanent marker and a jar of paint. Just like camouflage in the military or in nature, I have chosen just a few shades of colors that are similar to the houses nearby so our wishes will blend into the landscape and be protected. There is light yellow and dark yellow and greenish yellow, but just like the colors in camouflage, they are all very similar and are meant to make the wall blend into the surroundings. The colors might look almost IDENTICAL, but when we get all our wishes on the wall you will see how they are different and how they will work together like camouflage.

After you have chosen your marker and jar of paint, you will then choose ONE brick of the wall. The brick you choose can be anywhere on the wall that is within your reach, as close to or far away from anyone else's brick. You will copy your wish from your index card to your brick and then use the paint to cover the wish and your brick. When you're done, you will return the paint and then write your name beneath the title of the Wish Wall mural so that everyone walking by will know who made it.

Initial Steps:

- Choose a permanent marker
- Choose a jar of paint
- Choose ONE brick that is within your reach

I will take three questions about what we are going to do.

Students respond briefly.

Active Engagement:

Everyone put your coats on, return to your desks for your index cards, and line up by the door.

Walk to mural wall (15 minutes).

Here we are at the mural wall. This is _____, who will be helping us with our materials. As you can see, the wall has been painted yellow so that it begins to camouflage and blend in with the houses nearby.

_____ lays out materials.

Everyone choose a marker, a jar of paint, and ONE brick on the wall for your wish. Write your wish with the marker—staying inside the edges of the brick if you can—then paint over your wish with the paint and paintbrush. When you're done, bring back the paint and write your name in a brick beneath the title with the orange marker.

Next Steps:

- Write your wish on your brick in permanent marker: stay on your brick only
- Paint over your wish with the paint and paintbrush
- Return your paint & marker to the materials area
- Write your name, with Kelly's or Lucy's help

Students choose marker and jar of paint, then write/paint on wall. Repeat with Group 2. Andi will be taking video of the event and _____ will be taking photographs and assisting with materials.

Return to classroom.

The Link:

Congratulations! Today we made the wall of wishes! The Wish Wall Mural. Seeing as we are just a class of seventeen—twenty-two with everyone included—we only have twenty-two wishes on the wall. And as we all know, the wishes are the most important part of this mural. As the wishes are the most important part of this mural, I thought we should try to get as many other wishes as possible. So I've invited anyone to come to the wall tomorrow night to add his or her wish to the mural. You can invite anyone you want: maybe your parents, your siblings, or your friends. I will send home a notice to your parents about it. Tomorrow night, people from the neighborhood are going to add their wishes and names to the mural, too. The more wishes we have on the wall, the more powerful it will be as an artwork.

We talked about camouflage, and how camouflage is a form of coloring and patterning used to offer protection. We talked about how the idea of camouflage was considered when choosing the colors and patterns for the Wish Wall Mural. But most exciting, today we made the wall of wishes: The Wish Wall Mural! Congratulations!

I hope you had fun and thought about some interesting ideas today. I hope all your wishes will come true. On Friday I will return for my final class to talk about the Wish Wall Mural website and show you the pictures that Andi took today.

INDEX CARD DIRECTIONS:

Initial Steps:

1. Choose a permanent marker
2. Choose a jar of paint
3. Choose ONE brick that is within your reach
- 4.

Next Steps:

1. Write your wish on your brick in permanent marker: stay on your brick only
2. Paint over your wish with the paint and paintbrush
3. Return your paint and marker to the materials area
4. Write your name, with Kelly or Lucy's help
